Pop Art

- Pop art reflected the new wealth, consumerism, and light-hearted attitudes that followed the post-war period.
- It was also a reaction against abstract expressionism, the dominant art movement of the 1950s, which was serious and inward-looking.
- Pop art was playful and ironic, and ignored the rules of the traditional art world.

Pop Art

- Pop art examines the distinction between "high art" and popular culture, and questions the role of the artist.
